NAIDOC Week

This page contains a series of articles and curriculum resources that we hope inspired and encouraged the celebration of NAIDOC Week.

It also contains feature stories looking at the incredibly important role education has to play in addressing inequity and racism and in ensuring all Australians recognise the wrongs done in the past and set about making the future better and brighter.

Enjoy the material and the stories. Share them with your colleagues and your students. We hope you enjoy celebrating NAIDOC Week.

My public education

To celebrate NAIDOC Week, Western Teacher reached out to some prominent Western Australians of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander heritage who also attended public schools. We asked them about their experiences growing up and going through the state school system, their thoughts on Indigenous education and how successful outcomes for Indigenous students can be attained. These are their stories.

Celebrating NAIDOC Week feature stories

Authorised by Sally Dennis, General Secretary, The State School Teachers' Union of W.A.
ABN 54 478 094 635 © 2026